The Commencement of the Washington High School.

Thousands Gather in Convention Hall to Witness the Graduating Exercises - Commissioner Macfarland Presides-Address to the Class by Prod H Wines-Prizes Awarded.

The annual commencement of the Wash ington High Schools was held last night in Convention Hall, corner of Fifth and L Streets northwest. About 5,000 people were present to give a hearty godspeed to the 168 graduates of the several schools.

The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and, as the chairman said in his address of welcome and congratulation, the weather smiled upon the occasion. Music was furnished by the Marine Band, under the leadership of Prof. Santelmann, and served as a pleasing interlude to the several addresses and exercises.

Henry B. F. Macfarland, Commissioner of the District, under whose special super-vision are the public schools, presided. The following was the programme:

One of the pleasing features of the programme was the entrance of the grad-untes. It was at 8:39 o'clock that the band reached its fourth selection. Upon the stage the faculty of the high schools, the chairman of the evening, and a few guests had taken their seats. As the first strains of "High School Cadets" sounded through the hall there was a sharp order at the "Forward, march!" and the girls of the high schools, dressed in white, filed into the hall. As the long line stretched down the hall and as the boys began to appear, the audience arose, cheered, and vociferously applauded the young who were turning from books to vocations, from study in the high school to harder study in college or professional school, from the educational period to the stern

Mr. Macfarland's Address

In his address of welcome Mr Macfarland made a pleasant hit in describing how ter word to be said to you members of the graduating class tonight. Be a good man. Be a good woman. Be a good citi-zen. 'Be good, my dear, and let who will be clover; do noble things, not dream them all day long."

"Knowledge puffeth up, love buildeth up, and after all the great thing is character. To stand in your place, to do your duty, to serve your city in all truth and bonor—this is the best result that can be not stand and the propagation for the me from all your preparation for the strife of life.

"As the official head of the city, I call "As the official head of the city, I call upon you to be true to her. She is worthy of your love and develon. She has been a tender mother. She has cared for you, protected you, educated you. And now you must strive to repay her by loving interest and noble living. You must cultivate that civic feeling, that civic pride which they say we lack because Washington is the capital of the nation, and not take great area or great population to make a great city. Think of Athens, think of Edinburgh. Nor do you have to get rich or get office to be a great citizen. The public opinion, which is the real ruler of this city, is made up of the personal opinion of private citizens, most of whom are neither wealthy nor powerful. Perhaps the greatest service you can do your city is to make and to keep that ublic opinion sane, sensible, and trong, Do not wait for some great thing to do plain duty at the post where God has placed you, and so you will be ready for whatever opportunity comes. Do not be a grumbler or a captious critic, and let patience have her perfect work. There patience have her perfect work. There is opportunity for everyone of you, as President Seth Low so well said. There is room at the bottom as well as at the top for the faithful, cheerful, persistent, worker. Soon, very soon, we who are now carrying on the work of the world will be gone and you must be ready to take our subsects.

"Count not your lives dear unto you in "Count not your lives dear unto you in the service of your city and your country. 'Omnia relinquit servare rem publicem' is cut in the memorial to Col. Hobert Shaw on Boston Common. May you be ready, if need be, to give up all, yes, life itself, in patriotic service. It is easier to die for your city or your country than it it to live for it. Yet, if you would not live poorly and ingloriously, you must live thus unselfishly. If you do you will know the real joy of life and achieve its real success, even if you never become rich

Address of Mr. Wines. Fred H. Wines, the orator of the evening, was late in coming. Mr. Macfarland stated that the orator of the evening was unavoidably detained and he suspected that it was for the purpose of adding an-other 10,000 to Washington's census. The Commissioner was not permitted to go any further with his excuses, for just then Mr. Wines entered the hall and was properly introduced. In part he said:

"There are many ways in which grad-uation day resembles a wedding. It is a great event in a man's life or a woman's life when the few formal words are said. which make them man and wife. It some-times seems that the formula is not at all commensurate with the importance of the event which it solemnizes. Like it is day. It is a great event in to have won a diploma, and it one's life to have won a diploma much resembles a wedding ring.

"At a wedding I never know which to ympathize with most, the groom, the ride, or the bride's mother. And so it is bride, or the bride's mother. And so it is tonight, my sympathies go outward in several directions. First to these young people, then to the teachers, and finally to the public. I think I know how these young people feel tonight with their work done and their achievements won. They have bright aspirations. They see things with big eyes. I had such a pair of eyes once, but I lost them long ago. They may think there is nothing they cannot do it. think there is nothing they cannot do if they have the opportunity. Well, they will have the opportunity for fortune gives every man at least one chance. The future will blind your ambitions with the colors of success and your life may not be what you think it will tenight, but it will be the worse for bright hopes, the large , and the keen anticipations of the man has his price in the commercial world, and you can always find some one whom you can sell dishonest wares, effort, service. But if you would have a con-science void of offence, if you would live a life that you will not be ashamed of when it is over, be honest,"

"I have one word of advice in passing. Whatever you do in life, do it with all your might, with all your heart, and with all your mental vigor and power. Then there is no virtue more needed than the old-fashioned one of honesty. If you would live as you ought to live you must give an equivalent for what you receive.

Sympathy for Teachers.

Mr. Wines then spoke of his sympathy for teachers, and paid a high tribute to their devotion and fidelity to duty, and their sacrifices for their profession.. He then reverted to the discussion which has been going on for months past in the papers regarding the method of teaching. Mr. Wines spoke of a visit he made to the school of Felix Adler in New York, and how the method of hand training and nature study appealed to him. Remarking to Mr. Adler that something like that was needed in the public schools, the latter told him that it was impossible of attainment. "You have not the teachers," said Mr. Adler, "and you will not have time to make them." Passing from this Mr. Wines showed that the method might be good, and that t was yet to be brought to success, when the right teachers could be procured. He thought the schools of the District had held up a high standard and in closing Mr.

Wines said:
"I do feel that it would be wrong for me to stand here and not say that I think Mr. Powell, the Superintendent of Schools, has been most unkindly and unjustly treated "

Books Laid Aside and the Long Summer Vacation Begun.

Exercises in the Various Divisions Standing of the Papils Announced -List of Those Who Have Been Pro moted to the High Schools-Fall Term Commences September 17.

The public school buildings of the Ditrict are empty and deserted this moraing. Only the sound of the janitor's footsteps will echo through them, as the shades are pulled down and the several rooms put in shape for the long summer

The schools closed vesterday with songs and recitations by the children and a few remarks by the teachers bidding a temporary farewell to their flocks. It was a happy day for both pupils and teachers, for the wisest need rest and the youthful citizens of the District are not averse to a little play and cessation of study.

At the embryo commencements in the several grades the little ones were informed of their class standing and those who were advanced were truly glad, and those who were not swallowed their disappointment in the bright anticipations of the summer holiday. The exercises in most cases ended at 1 o'clock, and vacation began. The schools will open again the Scatember 17.
